I'm still thinking of you so many years later. We weren't close, but your life and passing had an impact on me. I attended the visitation but did not attend your funeral. Facing the death of someone so close to my own age was terrifying. I hate that you missed out on so many life experiences, and I was just thinking about everything that happened since I was your age. I'm sad that you aren't here to experience everything, but if you are in heaven with Jesus, you don't know the pain and suffering in this world, and that is infinitely better than life. I hope your family and fiancé are doing well. I never saw your fiancé mentioned in your memorials, but I remember seeing how much he loved you, and I know he mourned your passing. I don't know what to say. I hope to bring flowers to your grave one day soon. I love you. Rest easy.

Haley was an amazing girl. I saw her last week in my psychology class. I want to apologize to the Cobb family for not attending the funeral service. I would have been there, but unfortunately i found out about her passing in class Tuesday November 3,2009. I keep thinking of the many things i could have done or said to be a better friend. I miss her and pray that she is looking at the face of Jesus right now. To the family: I pray a peace and blessing be over you all. I ask God that He would fill each and every one of you with Love and hope. Haley was and now is beautiful. I am so thankful for your daughter and sister. I pray that strength would be given to Richard, Julie, and Tyler. May you abide in hope, faith, and most of all Love.With love and all sincerity,Daniele Lin Windham##imported-begin##Daniele Lin Windham##imported-end##

I was just now following a car in Tallahassee that has Haley's name on it, which led me to look up the obituary and to send prayers and hugs to the family of this young girl. Wishing God's healing and peace for all.-Jim

I only knew Haley from working with her for a short time. She is a wonderful, happy and inspiring person. I admired her drive and determination and no matter how tough times would get at work she would always get you to laugh or at least smile. God will keep her and take care of her and with that I pray for you and her friends to find peace. Bless you always and let God guide you down your path of grieving.##imported-begin##Neenah Lancaster-Riemer##imported-end##
